

Tax to zero hours, 1,000 young people learning about £, by doing it for real!

Join our charity on the frontline as we arm young people with budgeting, banking and borrowing skills in schools and youth groups across the UK for Global Money Week 2015.

11-25 year olds will team-up with a worldwide alliance of 120 countries and three million young people raising awareness of financial education.

Just days before the Budget, 9-13 March will see our experts helping youths tackle debt, student finance, pensions and government spending in expert-led workshops, youth-led savings banks, competitions and enterprise projects through activities, games, debates, role play and quizzes.

GMW is a golden chance to see how financial education is faring after joining the National Curriculum last September. Our youths will also help ring the opening bell at the London Stock Exchange, tackle saving at a special Youth Money Conference at the British Museum and present the future of banking to world leaders of banking at Innovate Finance.

Quotes

"GMW is a call to arms to anyone who has ever wanted to help young people manage their money for the future. Get involved, download free resources, ask your child's school what they are doing to boost financial literacy and start talking about money at home. Together we can ensure quality financial education so young people dodge debt and avoid the mistakes of the past".

Lily Lapenna Co-CEO & Founder, MyBnk.

"It opened my eyes to the bigger picture and makes me want to learn more about the economy".

Mohammed Khalifa, 25, School of Hard Knocks Youth, London.
